GREETINGS and welcome to the first issue of the all-new, redesigned Q-Link Update™! We've made a number of changes, as you can see!

First of all, the Update's bigger. This gives us room to bring you more news about upcoming events, and cover the subjects you're interested in with more depth. For instance, this month's "Downloading" feature and pullout guide will introduce you to downloading quickly and easily.

Secondly, there's the new design itself, which will enable you to get around the magazine faster and find the information you're looking for more easily. You'll have everything you need to get the most of the unique programming Q-Link® has to offer.

With this issue, we also bring your our first guest columnist — Q-Link member GloriaV1 shares her feelings about online friendships in her essay, "The Computer Room."

Finally, acting on a suggestion we've received from many members, we're adding a monthly "Letters to the Editor" column. Tell us your reaction to a particular story, suggest topics you'd like to see covered in the Update — anything that pertains to the magazine's content. Our Customer Service Department and QGuides will continue to help you with other questions about your Q-Link membership.

LETTERS

Dear Editor:

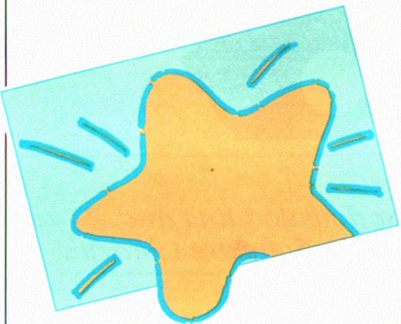
I read about the new Women Today area on Q-Link in the July Update. Since then, I've been hanging out in two of the newer rooms in People Connection — Women Today and Men's Issues.

Although there is a time and a place for some of the flirty banter that goes on between men and women in PC, I'm glad there are places where we can meet and openly discuss the issues that concern us. The best part is, it's not just enlightening — it's fun! Question: Do these groups meet regularly?

Nampoc
Arlington, VA

Yes, Nampoc, the groups do meet regularly! Men's Issues meets in a People Connection® room every Thursday night at 10 p.m. and Women Today meets Tuesday nights at 10 p.m. Men's and Women's Issues groups alternate meeting on Monday nights in Just For Fun's Crossroads Cafe.

For more information on issues of concern to both men and women, visit the Women Today area, located in The Family Center of Just For Fun, or the new Human Sexuality area in The Learning Center (see page 3).



Dear Editor:

I'm new to Q-Link, and though I like it a lot, sometimes I have questions and I'm not sure how to go about getting the answers. Is there someplace online I can always find help?

BronzeToe

Aurora, CO

QGuides are available online at all times and can tell you everything you need to know about Q-Link's services, events and special features. You'll find QGuides on duty in the Lobby of People Connection and in People Connection's "HELP" room during the busiest hours on the system.

For basic questions about Q-Link services, you should first check the Members' Online Guide in the Customer Service Center. It's loaded with answers to questions about connecting and billing, the Update, screen names and much, much more.

Dear Editor:

Put the "All Time Top Downloads" along with the monthly list!

Lone Star5
Birmingham, Ala.

Lone Star, you can check out the All Time Top Downloads online! They're listed in the Library Highlights section of the Game World Support Group, one of the Computing Support Groups in the Commodore Information Network.

We don't need to run the All Time Top Downloads list in the Update every month because it doesn't change very often. But the Downloads page has changed — see for yourself on page 8. And for more on the Game World Support Group, turn to page 6!

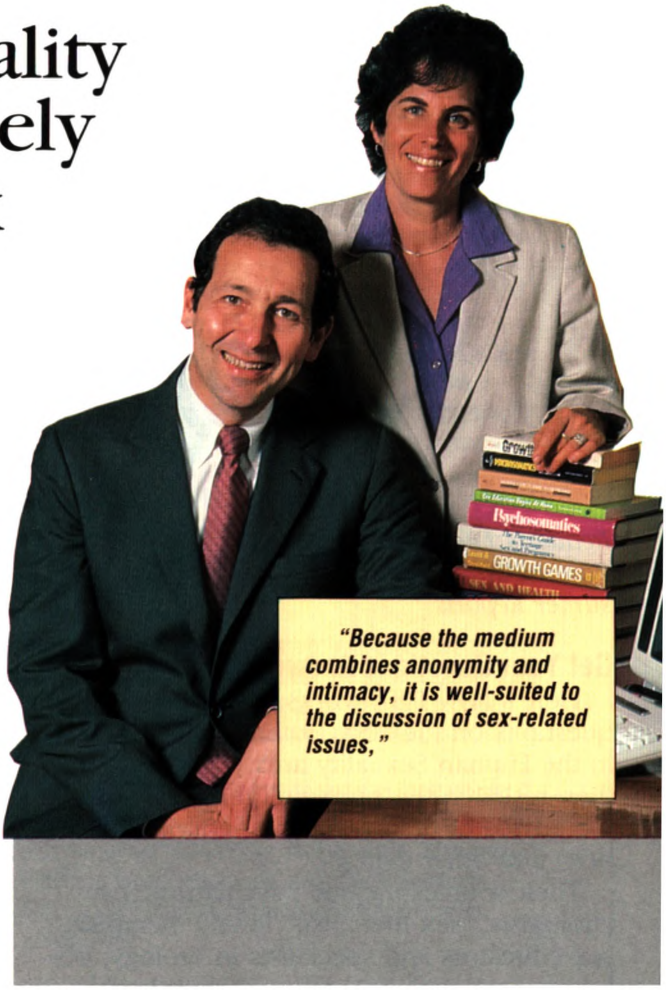
New Human Sexuality Area Provides Timely Information, Frank Answers To Your Questions

The new Human Sexuality area (HSX), located in The Learning Center, debuts this month on Q-Link® to provide subscribers with practical, authoritative advice concerning sexuality and relationships. HSX provides you with a direct link to foremost specialists in sexual medicine.

You can use HSX to get confidential, up-to-date answers to your most personal questions. Important: HSX does not replace the care of your physician. Every person's physical and emotional problems are unique and require the care of qualified professionals.

Meet the Lewises

Howard and Martha Lewis, the creators of HSX, have found the online approach very successful for dealing with sensitive subject matter. "Because the medium combines anonymity and intimacy, it is well-suited to the discussion of sex-related issues," says Howard. "As much as possible we offer information you can use. HSX is a very self-help oriented service. Questions deal with the medical and psychological aspects of sexuality, and we're constantly expanding into new areas."



"Because the medium combines anonymity and intimacy, it is well-suited to the discussion of sex-related issues,"

The Lewises have written 10 books, including "The People's Medical Manual," "The Parent's Guide to Teenage Sex and Pregnancy," and "Sex and Health." They are also contributing editors to Medical Aspects of Human Sexuality, the Journal of Sex Education· and Therapy and Sexuality and Disability. Articles by them have appeared in Reader's Digest, Family Circle, and Consumer Reports.

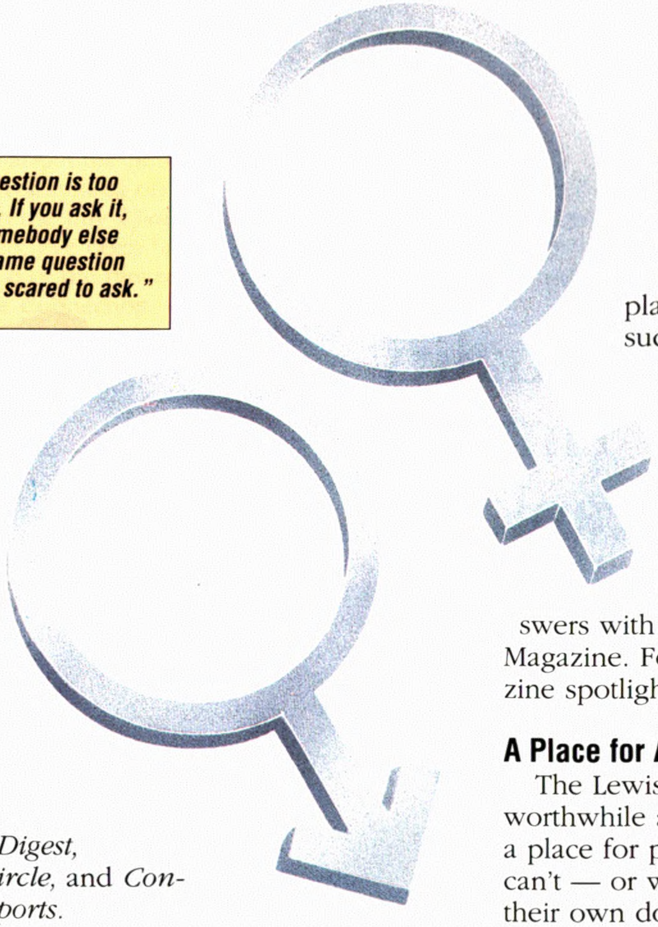
"No question is too ridiculous. If you ask it, there's somebody else with the same question who is too scared to ask."



Get Your Questions Answered

Here's how HSX works. You post your questions on the HSX Hotline, a menu choice in the Human Sexuality area. The Lewises then research the problem, generally seeking the advice of their consulting editors (see box) and other experts.

Their sources include psychiatrists, psychologists, sex therapists, family therapists, sex educators and specialists in urology, obstetrics, gynecology, maternal-child health, and adolescent medicine. Non-medical contributors include a lawyer and a management consultant, who provide advice concerning sexual concerns on the job.

The Lewises then place Hotline questions and responses in appropriate topic areas in Human Sexuality. Members' identities are, of course, removed.

The answers and articles featured in HSX are part of an ever-growing information source divided into separate online topic areas. These areas contain replies to hundreds of questions that the Lewises have compiled. Topics include family planning, single life, marriage, social success, and areas devoted primarily to men's issues, women's concerns, homosexuality and talking with kids about sexual topics.

When the Lewises receive a large number of questions concerning a specific issue, they respond by supplementing their answers with feature articles in the HSX Online Magazine. For example, this month the magazine spotlights AIDS.

A Place for Answers, Reassurance

The Lewises feel that one of the most worthwhile aspects of HSX is that it provides a place for people to ask questions that they can't — or won't — ask friends, counselors or their own doctors. Says Martha, "No question is too ridiculous. If you ask it, there's somebody else with the same question who is too scared to ask.

"One of the very important things we do is provide reassurance," Martha continues, "People are very concerned with 'normality,' and need to feel they are O.K."

Additional information about using the Hotline is available in the HSX Hotline area. For an overview of HSX, choose the menu options that tell you about highlights, profile the staff and provide guidelines for the use of HSX. You can gain access to Human Sexuality from the main menu of The Learning Center or in The Family Center of Just For Fun.

Human Sexuality is compiled in an informal and straightforward magazine style, and because of the frank language with which the subject matter is treated, only readers comfortable with such an approach are advised to proceed.

Selected HSX Consulting Editors

The Lewises have assembled a team of highly-respected consulting editors for their Human Sexuality service. Their consultants include:

Nicholas J. Fiumara, M.D., M.P.H. has taught at the Boston University School of Medicine, Tufts University School of Medicine, and served as an instructor at Harvard Medical School. For Expert Game Support, CIN'S Game World is Your Best Bet

Everybody loves to play computer games, but sometimes getting the game to run correctly turns out to be the real puzzler. Disks can be hard to load, directions hazy, or worst of all, you can run out of game strategy and need some hints to win.

Located in the Computing Support Groups area of the Commodore Information Network, Game World has answers to all your gaming questions about commercial and public domain game software — plus thousands of games for you to download and play!

Shoot-'Em-Up arcade games rank among the most popular downloads in the Game World Software Libraries, and this fast-paced action game is a classic.

Your mission is to protect your city from the inevitable attack of alien ships. As a spaceship hovers over your helicopter dropping missiles, only fast maneuvering and accurate firing on your part can save the day — if a missile gets past you, the city is doomed!

The action is fast, the graphics and sound good. It may not be highbrow adventure, but this game's definitely a keeper!

GAME HARDWARE

Q. What type of controller should I buy to play games? Is one type better than the others, or is it more a matter of personal preference?

A. You have a variety of choices when it comes to picking out a controller, and some choices are better than others. Basically you need to choose between a joystick, mouse, a drawing pad, paddles, or a light pad.

By far the most popular controller, especially for game playing, is the joystick. It has become the defacto controller for most of the gaming computer world.

Running close behind this is the mouse. Commodore has produced two different mice — the older version, called the 1530, acts just like a joystick as far as the computer is concerned. While this is convenient to use instead of a joystick, it doesn't move the pointer as fast as you move the mouse.

Commodore's current version of the mouse, the 1531, is a proportional controller. This means that, for software written to take advantage of it, the faster you move the mouse, the faster the pointer moves across your screen. If you own the 1531 you can make it work like a 1530 (joystick) by holding down the right mouse button when you turn on the computer. It's surely the best of both worlds.

If you are sharped-eyed, you can still pick up a pair of paddles for the Commodore line. These are now rather hard-to-find, but served as the original Commodore controller. They are generally sold in pairs, one for each player. Paddles have a knob on the front used to move objects on the screen in two directions, as in the original video game "Pong".

If you want to use your Commodore for drawing, there's the drawing pad. Perhaps the best known of these is the "Koala" pad produced by Koala Technologies. These are popular with artists as well as younger children (and parents who prefer graffiti on the computer screen instead of the walls). These pads come with a stylus that you use to draw on the pad.

Then, using the proper program, the drawings can be transferred to the screen.

Some people still use light pens, especially those that use their computers for artwork. By putting the "pen" against the computer screen the computer will draw under it, just like a pen and pencil. The principle is similar to the drawing pad, and like the drawing pad is better suited to drawing than actual game-playing.

The kind of controller you buy is really a matter of your preference and individual needs. Most people find the joystick to be a good first choice, followed by the ever-popular mouse. For more game hardware information, check the Game World message boards.

THUGS KIDNAP P.C. BARKEEP

Clues Night 10 p.m. August 4th

By EileenC
QPI Staff Writer

BULLETIN: Vienna, VA (QPI) August 1, 1988 - Local police report that "BonnieB3," 25, of Vienna, Va., well-known proprietor of Bonnie's Bar, was abducted in her bar by masked thugs.

"It was a night of Sheer Insanity," says bar patron "RJScott." "One minute, Bonnie was serving drinks...and the next minute — POOF — she was gone."

Vienna investigators say that they suspect foul play is involved. Bonnie was last seen working the early shift on July 31. At approximately 9:20 p.m., she reportedly shrieked, "Uh oh, P.C. terrorists!" Witnesses say that as she screamed, the lights went out in the bar. When they came back on, Bonnie was missing. The only visible trace left of Bonnie was a bar towel with BB3 monogrammed on the front, they said.

Witnesses outside the bar on the night of the abduction report that three masked 'Linkers were seen lurking near the establishment's side entrance shortly before the kidnapping occurred. Police say that no positive IDs have been made. However, witnesses reported that the 'Linkers in question chanted, "We ain't leavin' without BonnieB3."

Highly-placed anonymous sources report that the bartender may be in the clutches of the notorious online gang known as "Casino Banditos," who are said to be demanding a lifetime supply of Q-Chips in return for Bonnie's release.

Police refuse to comment on a report that Miss "B3" was whisked away by hoodlums hired by Just For Fun's "Aunt Gabby," who has been accused of trying to muscle in on Bonnie's bar business.

Fanatic sports fans from the Grandstand in Just For Fun's Sports Center are also being called in for questioning, say police. Officials believe that the fans may have kidnapped Bonnie after she refused to let them watch last weekend's game on the bar television.

Vienna police have requested that psychics from Just For Fun's Astrology Club assist in the investigation. Experts from Just For Fun's Police Link are also involved in the case.

Police ask that all 'Linkers with information about the incident come forward at Clues Night, 10 p.m. on Thursday, August 4 in the People Connection Auditorium. During Clues Night, officials will narrow down the list of crime suspects. Remember — your screen name ensures that your identity will remain anonymous.

Police also request that any clues, suspicions and allegations be posted in the "Who Kidnapped Bonnie?" area of P.C. Link's Special Events section beginning on August 4.

Bonnie's friends and coworkers ask that you help solve the kidnapping by participating in the Sheer Insanity Crime Forum, 9 p.m. on Sunday, August 28 in the Auditorium. You can help police piece together the puzzle of this atrocious crime, restore justice to People Connection, and return Bonnie back to her bar!

Look for this month's special P.C. events, including:

The debut of All My Q-Linkers, an exclusive soap opera drama, at 7:30 p.m. on Sunday, August 14 in the Auditorium.

RabbitJack's Casino®

Poker Specials Highlight RabbitJack's Casino

After the anniversary celebrations (for the Casino and the Casino staff), RabbitJack is taking some time off to recuperate in the Caribbean . For the next few months, we'll be highlighting all of the wonderful games you can play in the Casino — it's now much more than basic poker, blackjack, bingo, and slot machines! This month, we'll talk about the action at the Casino Poker Tables.

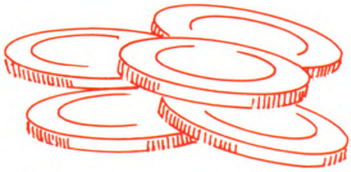
RabbitJack's Casino has come a long way from the days when you had to wait around for another person to show up to play a game of regular 5-card stud. You wouldn't recognize the Casino's Poker Area now!

There are special poker events almost every night of the week — events that include special variations of the game, like guts, lowball and Hi or Low Spade in the Hole. You'll also find staff members' own variations of the game, some of them unlike any poker you've played before; and tournaments where you can win Plus time and great prizes.

And now, games are available at more times throughout the night, so you can play whether you're on the East coast or the West!

Monday: Tournaments, TNT

Kick off the week at 9 p.m. on Monday nights with a two-hour poker tournament, where you'll be awarded up to three hours of Plus time if you win more Q-Chips at the poker tables than anyone else before 11 p.m. You don't have to register or be at a specific table — just show up at any poker table and play for prizes! At 10 p.m. every Monday, QRJ Nikki hosts "TNT" Poker, a game that combines trivia and anagram skills with poker and stakes of up to four times the pot!



Midweek: Win Plus Time, 25,000 Q-Chips!

Wednesday nights starting at 10 p.m., the Casino staff plays the specials you ask for — if there's a clamor in the Lounge for Hi/Low poker, that's what they'll play! Or hit the poker tables for the three-hour late night poker tournament starting at 11 p.m. You can win up to four hours of Plus time!

Thursday nights at 10 p.m., QRJ Mouse hosts "Mouse Trap," a tournament-style game where you can win 25,000 Q-Chips or more if you're the smart poker player who can "trap" QRJ Mouse.

The Weekend: Specials, Tourneys, "Joker's Wild"!

You call the specials again at 7 p.m. on Friday nights and again at 11 p.m. Get a group of people in the Lounge asking for your brand of poker, and the QRJ on duty will host a game! Then at midnight, QRJ Joker hosts "Joker's Wild," played like regular five-card stud, except that QRJ Joker acts as an extra wild card that everyone can use!

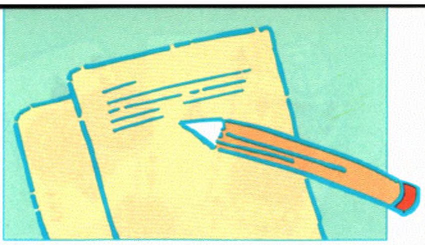
Saturdays bring you two tournaments and two opportunities to win Plus time and merchandise — a two-hour tournament at 3 p.m. and a three-hour tournament at 9 p.m.

Cap off the weekend at 10 p.m. Sunday nights with poker specials. We'll host three hours of just poker specials — no bingo, blackjack, or slots tonight, thank you! The QRJ hosting the specials will move from table to table throughout the night, just to make sure that everyone gets a chance to play.

Special Events

In addition, we'll be hosting two special events for the month — Casino Night at 9 p.m. on Saturday, August 6, and Casino Day at 4 p.m. on Saturday, August 20. Lots of QRJs will be on hand to host the special games that make the Casino one of the hottest spots on Q-Link® — more than a year old and more exciting each month!

With all the poker events now in the Casino, at times convenient for everyone, there's no reason you can't be a player, too!



Guest Column

The Computer Room

by Gloria L. Vasquez
(aka Gloria V1)

A member shares her vision of travels on Q-Link®.

It stands as it has stood for the last 10 months or so — this room once quiet, once empty and barren except for a bit of furniture — now transformed into what I call my Computer Room.

The walls of this room are covered from top to bottom with drawings, postcards, greeting cards, pictures — there is an easel with a painting soon to be completed, a stereo, T-shirts hanging in the closet (three or four catch my eye, they say Q).

There are books galore, software abounds. A giant poster of the United States covers a portion of one wall. Various binders sit atop a table, some with my writings, others filled with saved E-Mail and graffiti. I saved whatever caught my heart — even some that did not — and they sit in these binders.

So many things in this room, I cannot begin to tell. It has become a haven, a rest place, a home away from home. As I walk down the hall, I swear I hear voices coming from this room — many, all talking, answering each other. But of course, that could not be so, the room is void of people. Or is it?

It's 5 p.m., too early to sign on, yet the room calls me as I pass by. I stop — someone comes to mind, many come to mind, as if my head is full of living beings. Many who are here waiting, waiting to touch another with the power of the soul.

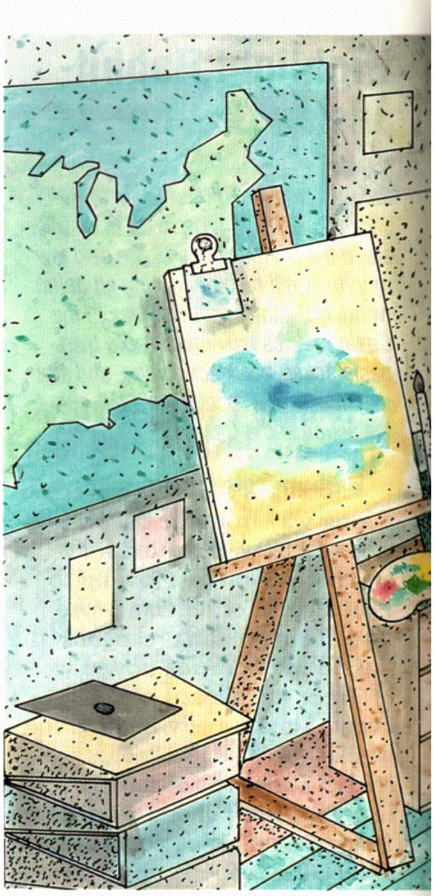
I enter the room and sit down for a moment, picking up a printout to read ....

Suddenly, the voices begin their chatter, seeming to bounce off the walls. The room fills with the clatter of keys clicking away. Disk drives grinding away, people saving, downloading and uploading, bells ringing loudly, hitting a jackpot in RabbitJack's Casino®. The walls vibrate and seem to dance to the sound.

I feel I'm walking through a maze filled with cubicles, and in those rooms activities of all sorts are taking place. I know I have to see, to feel, to find out what each possesses.

As I glance to one side I see RJ wink at the audience, captivating all and bringing smiles to their faces, even the most dismayed, as they prepare to play the Wheel Watchers Show.

The clank of swords clashing sounds in my ear — I head in the direction of the sound and see two gallant knights pounding their fury as they fight. Their intent is not to kill, but compete, as the victor wins the lady they both love. Her tears and pleading halt the swords and they clash no more. Instead, the clinking of glasses sounds as they toast to each other, holding their glasses above their heads and saying, "Hail to thy lady and The Red Dragon Inn!"



Passing through the maze, a man's voice rings out. He boasts to be the President of the United States and has authority over the world; hence, he also rules Q. Another says he has killed a lion with his bare hands. I hear the lion's defeated roar turn to a purr while other tales begin to fill the air in The Liars' Club.

Questions galore sound to the right of me where the QGuides are having a rough night of keeping up with all the questions. Ah, but they're doing a good job. Being me, I want to help, so I throw in a little advice. Someone hollers, "Hey, wanna go private?" I take to the invitation like a duck to water.

I smell the onions frying, hear dishes rattling, a pan moving briskly across a stove — the aroma steers me in that direction. The Chef is preparing a gourmet meal for all to taste, followed by a glass of the finest wine. The exchange of recipes, casual conversation and mutual respect is obvious when they speak. I grab a fried onion as I leave The Chef's Kitchen in Just For Fun's Food and Wine Club.

In Just For Fun's Hobbies area, a familiar language is being spoken — ah, Spanish! I hear someone welcoming me with open arms. Adelante! Pasa, como estas! The romantic sound of the language fills my ears as I end my visit at the Spanish Club.

The start of the engine of a late-model car roars like a machine gun and its rat-tat-tat-tat. Kennedy on his last ride, John Lennon and his songs, the Hula-Hoop — the room bustles with talk of another time, some happy, some sad. I think of this and many other things as I leave the Baby Boomers' Room....

Have I been sleeping? I put down the printout that's still in my hand, now sweaty, and feel beads of perspiration upon my forehead. I've been transported, experienced sights and sounds, floated through time and space, so many feelings and senses, without ever leaving the room.

Of course, I must have been sleeping. It's quiet now, serene. I leave The Computer Room with a secret smile upon my lips, wrenching free of it until at least 6 p.m. Still, I look at the clock.

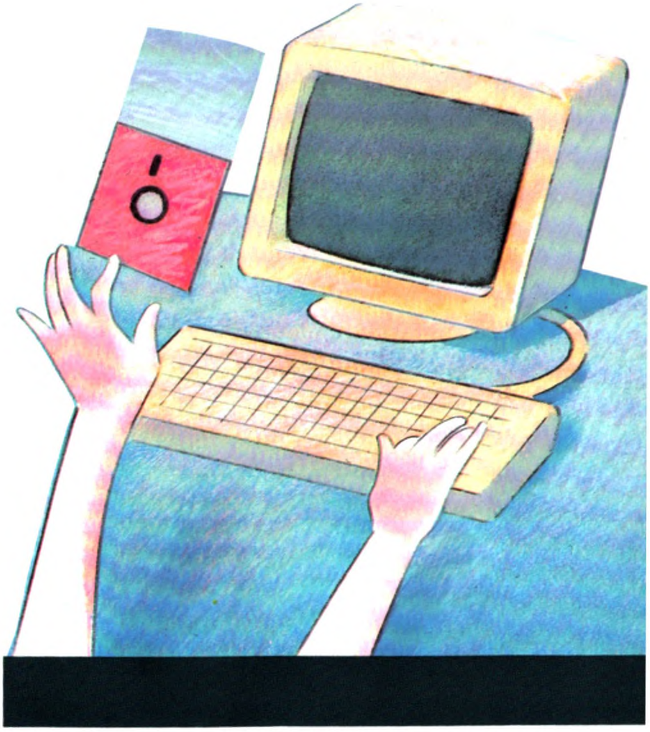
The amount of software available for your use through Q-Link® is nothing short of phenomenal — more than 15,000 programs to choose from.

Downloading Magic: Presto! A Software Library At Your Fingertips



No, it's not really magic. Finding Q-Link software in the public domain software libraries and downloading — that is, transferring software programs from Q-Link to a personal disk for your use offline — is not as tough as you might think. After doing it once or twice, it's as easy as using any other area on Q-Link!

Learning to download programs opens the door to a whole world for you, allowing you to make the most of your Commodore and Q-Link's software libraries. Once you know how to download, you can start building your personal software library to use offline.

Thousands of Programs, Handy Online Help

The amount of software available for your use through Q-Link is nothing short of phenomenal — more than 15,000 programs to choose from. Download a word-processing program for freelance writing, or software to create computer music, or a challenging game — all are available in the Commodore Information Network Software Libraries.

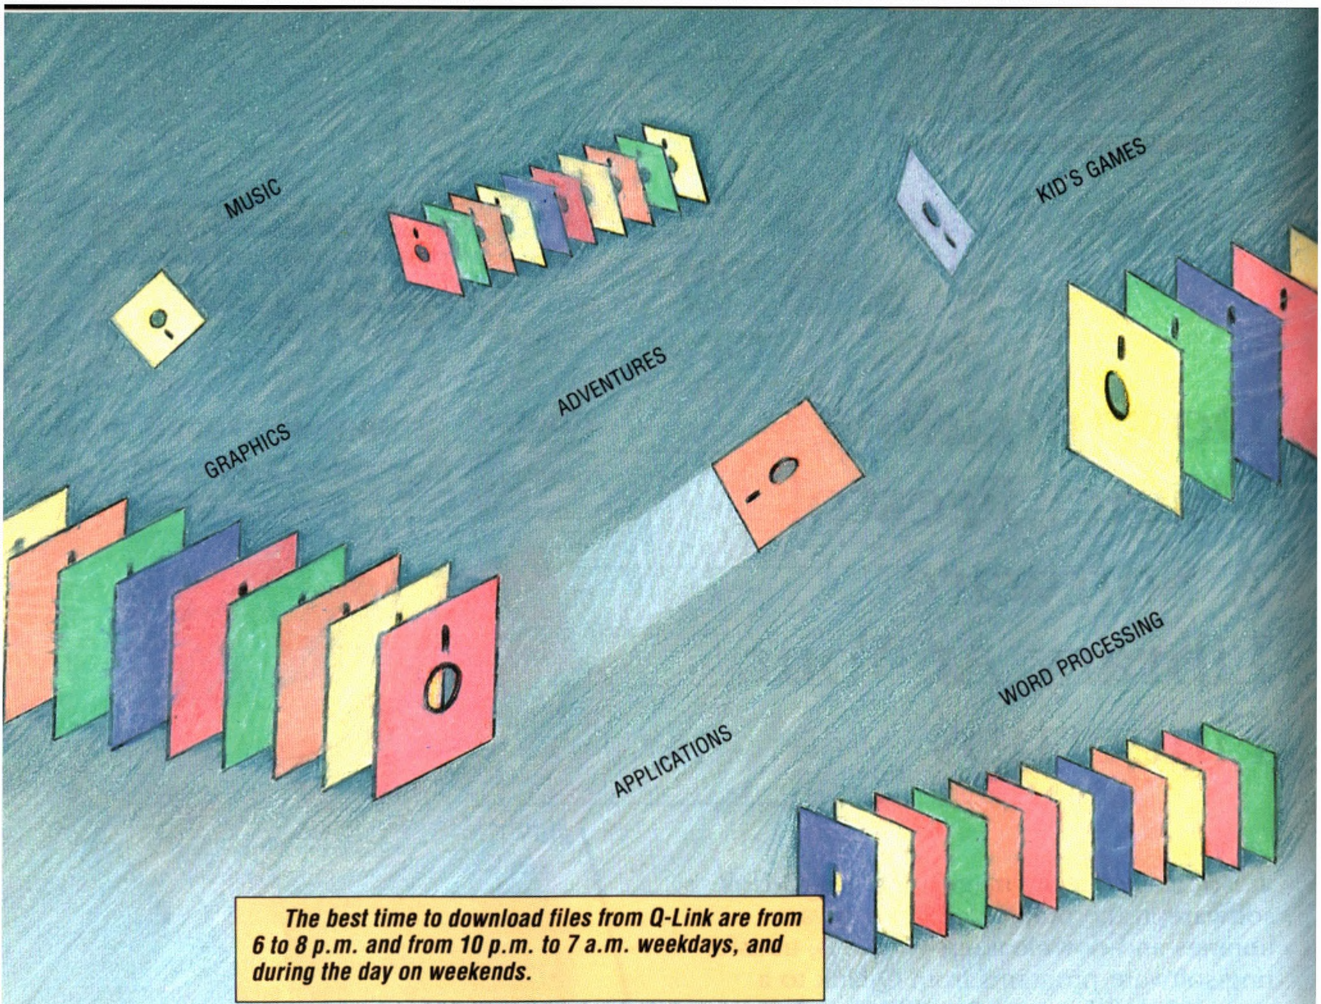
The Commodore Information Network (CIN) is also the place to get online help with downloading. In the software libraries, you can scan the downloading help board for tips, get a list of top downloads and get ideas for downloading the Library Highlights area. Information about utility programs is available in the Q-Link Utilities section of the Software Libraries (see box on page 22).

In CIN's Computing Support Groups, you can exchange software tips, get your questions answered and attend classes and conferences on a variety of hardware and software topics.

So don't sweat it. Take a deep breath and let's get started.

Your First Download

Q-Link downloading guides, both on and offline, make it particularly easy to dive right in. Go to the new Downloader's Starter Kit in the Commodore Information Network for all the information you need to get through your first downloading experience.



The best time to download files from Q-Link are from 6 to 8 p.m. and from 10 p.m. to 7 a.m. weekdays, and during the day on weekends.

CIN's Downloaders' Starter Kit includes a message board to use for posting your questions and receiving answers from other members. The software area librarian will respond to your questions and make the process as painless as possible. After you read through the online downloading information in the Starter Kit and successfully transfer the sample program to your disk, you're ready for the big time — downloading software you want to keep and use for yourself.

That's where the Download Guide included in this issue of the Update™ comes in handy. Its clear, step-by-step instructions and helpful hints take you straight through the process. Pull the guide out and keep it next to your computer, and you'll be ready to save programs whenever the mood strikes.

A Brief Rundown

The first thing you need to do is format a blank disk so it will accept the files you want to download. You can save more than one program on a disk — a directory on the disk itself is created automatically to show you what you've kept — but you only need to format the disk once.

Refer to the pullout Download Guide for information on formatting the disk, downloading the program, and viewing your disk directory of saved software.

When you locate the program online that you want to download, take the time to read the description and comments that are displayed online with the file — there may be important tips on loading or running the software once you've downloaded it. The Download Guide tells you how to find these comments and save descriptions to your disk.

There are a few other factors to take into account when downloading. For one thing, downloading at "off-peak" hours, when there are fewer people online, will speed up the process and minimize possible complications. The best time to download files from Q-Link® are from 6 to 8 p.m. and from 10 p.m. to 7 a.m. weekdays, and during the day on weekends.

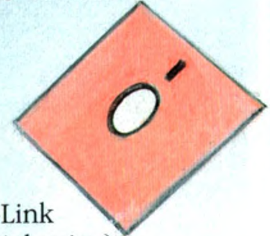
You can also save time and money by replacing your 300-baud modem with a 1200-baud modem. A 1200-baud modem substantially speeds up the download — up to 75%! The faster modem will pay for itself by saving you download time (you can order one online in the Q-Link Store in The Mall at a special price).



Once You've Got It, You've Got It All!

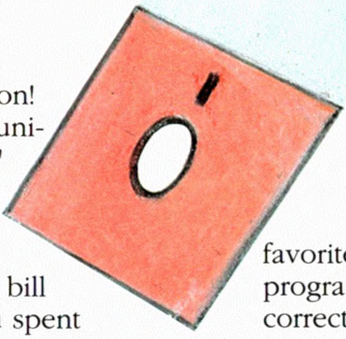
Learning to download software is the key to making the most of Q-Link, and you might be surprised where you'll find great files to download.

Looking for new recipes to try out? Download them from the Recipes Library of the Food and Wine Club in Just For Fun. Scan the work of aspiring poets and writers by downloading copies from the Software Libraries of Just For Fun's Crossroads Cafe. Students can get help with homework this fall by downloading tutoring programs, quizzes, and brain teasers from the varied files of The Learning Center. And private software collections of the Commodore experts and software publisher game demos are yours for the taking in the Commodore Software Showcase.

More Online Downloading Support

If you run into trouble downloading, there's no need to worry — leave a message for CIN's Librarian at the Downloading Help Desk in the Software Libraries. The librarian will research your question and post an answer for you, or refer you to a SysOp if necessary. You can also get SysOp names from the listing in the Members' Online Guide in the Customer Service Center — just locate the SysOp for the support group you need and E-Mail your question!

In the world of telecommunications, occasional "crashes," "freezes," and "glitches" are bound to occur. If you fall victim to an unsuccessful download, you can get your bill credited for the the time you spent online. Go to the Downloading/Uploading Information area of the Customer Service Center's Members' Online Guide.



Get A Complete Listing of All Programs

Order the Q-Link® 1988 Public Domain Software Directory in The Mall's Q-Link Store for a listing of over 15,000 programs available on Q-Link. Browse through it offline for your favorite entertainment, business, and utility programs. Then you can go straight to the correct library to make the software yours! You can order the directory for $11.95 in the Q-Link Store in The Mall.

The time it takes to master downloading is a small investment to make that will pay long-term dividends — your own software library at a fraction of the cost you'd pay for commercial software.

There's enough advice, computing group support and exciting software available online to make downloading a snap. The time it takes to master downloading is a small investment to make that will pay long-term dividends — your own software library at a fraction of the cost you'd pay for commercial software. Now's the time to explore all the worthwhile software that Q-Link brings into your home!

Downloading A Specific File

If you hear about a file you want to download while browsing through the software libraries, you can write down the exact filename and uploader's exact screen name, read the file description, and use this method to download more quickly and easily.

1. Select the Download a Specific File option from the Software Library menu of the Commodore Information Network (CIN).

2. Enter the exact file name you wish to download when prompted. Capitalization and spacing must be entered exactly like the file description.

3. Enter the exact screen name of the person who uploaded the file when prompted.

4. Insert a formatted disk when Q-Link tells you the file is available for downloading.

5. When the download is complete, the screen will display a message announcing that the file has been copied to your disk.

6. Insert your Q-Link Program Disk and press the F5 key to back out of the download menus.

In Search Of: Software Utilities

A utility program acts as a "workhorse" program that allows other software to run. Once you are confident of your downloading abilities, you may want to format a new disk and fill it with utility programs.

Some of the programs available on Q-Link have been "squeezed" or bundled together to save room and download time, and you'll need "unsqueezing" and unarcing programs to unbundle them so they'll run.

You may also need special utility programs to play some of the music files, display graphics or read text that you've saved to disk. GEOS, Amiga, and some CP/M programs are of a different format than C64 programs, and need to be converted before they can be used. The right utility program can do that, too.

Once again, there's online help available for information on the needed utility programs. Go to the Q-Link Utilties area in the Software Libraries section of CIN. You'll find explanations of the utility programs you need, and can download the utilities directly from this area.

Once you have both the program you want to run and any utilities you need, simple screen instructions on the program itself will explain how to load the needed utilities.

If you have questions, post them on the message boards here or get advice from the Applications Computing Support Group in the Commodore Information Network.
